

GDPR Directory

National Data Protection Authorities

Introduction:

This document contains the names and contact information for data supervisory authorities as detailed by the European Commission in 2018.

Legal considerations:

The GDPR allows for EU member states to determine how they wish to implement limited aspects of the regulation within their own state. The rules surrounding these aspects will be written into directives. In the UK, this is the Data Protection Bill and guidance is provided by the supervisory authority, the Information Commissioner's Office. If your organisation operates outside the UK but within any other nation subject to the GDPR, then you are advised to familiarise yourself with the relevant directives. In order to do this, you may wish to seek guidance from the relevant supervisory authority.

If your main business decisions are made in a member state other than the UK, then you will be required to notify a breach to the respective supervisory authority.
